WASHINGTON, February 22 .- Respect for the uniform of the army places formed the principal topic of discussion at the opening session here to-day of the Navy League of the United States, an organization devoted to the interests of the navy, which met In second annual convention.

The convention took up the question of the attitude displayed by the proprie-tors of certain public places in discrim-inating against the uniforms of the army, the navy and the marine corps, and the following resolution then was adopted:

Respect Uniform. "Resolved, That the Navy League of the United States is in favor of the paythe United States is in favor of the passage of a law by Congress which will enforce respect for the uniform of petty officers and enlisted men of the United States Army, Navy and Marine Corps at every time and place, and also the passage of laws by the Legislatures of the various States, making it a misdemeanor for any keeper of public-house, restaurant, theatre or other place of entertainment or amusement to discriminate against citizens wearing such uniforms."

In the afternoon the delegates were received by the President, who ad-

There is pienty of pressure of local interests for public buildings; plenty of pressure for local improvement in the river and harbor bill; but there is no special interest that is seeking to bring pressure to bear as it ought to be brought to bear for matters of sure to bear as it ought to be brought to bear for matters of great national concern, pre-eminently the navy. Persons who are engaged in the hurly-burly of active political life most naturally tend to pay especial heed to the requests that are insistent; and it behooves our people to encourage natriotic societies like this, which shall be insistent upon the needs of America as a whole.

"The President and Congress both need to perminded that it is necessary for the sake of America to encourage the upbuilding and the maintenance of the United States Navy. I am happy to say that whereas last year we failed to get a battleship, this year we have two. We have made good the loss we met with last year. Now, I want all of you in your respective homes, through the organs of public opinion, by your influence upon your representatives in every branch at Washington to see that the needs of the navy are not forgotten in the future. The navy has no one to speak for it save those who speak for it because of their devotion to the honor and the interest of the United States, and I ask that you and those like you make your voices heard for the general welfars and I de din of voices that speak only for special interests."

BY WALTER EDWARD HARRIS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 22 .-The Senate heard Senator Burkett, of Nebraska, read Washington's farewell address; all the departments closed in order to give the "tolling clerks" a chance to enjoy another one of the many holidays which come to employer of Uncle Sam, but beyond this there indicate that this was the anniversary Country. There was an unsuccessful effort made to have a balloon ascension under the auspices of the Aero Club, of New York, which sent over a mammoth aerial carriage for the occasion, but the wind was so strong no effort was even made to inflate the big bag. Both houses of Congress went ahead transacting business in apparent ob-livion of the fact that this was a legal holiday, commemmorative of the name of Washington.

Double Duty.

Senator Daniel is one of the busiest of men to-day, the absence of Senator Martin in Europe, causing the senior Senator to do double duty. His callers are so numerous he scarcely has time to devote attention to discussions on the floor of the Senate. He is much pratified at being able to have the naval appropriation full amended so as to make provision for the construction of a power-plant at the Norfolk Navy-Yard at a cost of $120,000. But he regrets that he was able to secure an increase of only $25,000 in the appropriation in the river and harbor bill for the improvement of James River, raising the total to $200,000.

LETTER OF FIRST PRESIDENT SOUNDS NOTE FOR CLEAN RULE

Interesting Document Brought to Light Again by Clerk of House.

In the course of his great task of classifying and refiling the old parchments in the cierk's office of the House of Delegates, Clerk John W. Williams has discovered a document which is full of interest to every American to-day, It is a letter from General George Washington to the Legislature of Virginia, and it is regarded as a singular coincidence that it was discovered on the birthday of the great statesman and general.

birthday of the great statesman and general.

No human eye has beheld the paper since it was enrolled in 1785, and it is a rare document, not only on account of its age, but because of the beautiful language in which it is couched and the clean and high sentiments it expresses. General Washington was then President of the United States, and the Legislature passed an act donating to him certain shares of stock in companies organized for the improvement of the Potomac and James Rivers. The letter is recited in an act which repeals the former act, General Washington having declined to accept the gift. The communication is addressed to the Governor of Virginia, as follows:

munication is addressed to the Governo of Virginia, as follows:

"Your Excellency having been pleased to transmit me a copy of the set appropriating to my benefit certain shares in the companies for opening the navigation of James and Potomac Hivers, I take the liberty of returning to the General Assembly through your hands the profound and grateful acknowledgments inspired by no signal a mark of their henefiful acknowledgments inspired by so signal a mark of their heneficent intentions towards me. I beg you, Sir to assure them that I am filled on this occasion with every sentiment which can flow from a heart warm with love formy country—sensible to every token of its approbation and affection and solitetions to testify in every instance a respectful submission to its wishes. With those sentiments in my bosom, I need not dwell on the anxiety I feel in being obliged in this instance to being obliged in this instance to decline a favor which is rendered no less flattering by the manner in which it is conveyed, than it is affectionate in itself. In explain-ing this obligation, I pass over a ing this obligation, I pass over a comparison of my endeavors in the public service with the many honorable textimonics of approbation which have already so far over-rated and over-puid them, reciting one consideration only which supersedes the necessity of recurring to every other. When I was first called to the station with which I was honored during the late conflict for our liberties, to the diffidence which I had so many reasons to feel in accepting it. dence which I had so many rea-sons to feel in necepting it, I thought it my duty to join a firm resolution to shut my hand against every pecualary recompense—to this resolution, I have invariably adhered—from this resolution (if I had the inclination) I do not consider myself at liberty to de-them to be persunded that a remembrance of this singular proof of their goodness towards me will never cease to cherish returns of the warmest affection and gratitude, I must pray that their act, so far as it has for its object my personal emolument, may not have lis effect. But if it should please the General Assembly to permit me to turn the destination of the fund vested in me from my private emoluments to objects of a public nature, it will be my study in selecting these, to prove the sincerity of my gratitude for the honor conferred on me, by preferring such as may appear most subservicate to the enlightened and patriotic views of the Legislature."

When this letter was received the following repealing act was passed:

"And whereas, the desire of the General Assembly to mark by the provisions above mentioned their sense of the Illustrious merits of the said George Washington, Esquire, at the same time that it is strengthened by this first and enduring proof of his title to the gratitude of his country, is superseded by their respect for his disinterested wishes and patriotic views;

February 24, 1907, GOD'S COVENANT WITH ABRAM. Nomadic life has always its own strong attraction. But the story of the migrations of this first of pilgrim fathers has a fascination peculiar to itself. Before the eye of imagination his caravan seems to pass. There goes the venerable shelk, clad in his crimson robe, wearing his silken turban with its filled of rope. His "princess," in all her Oriental finery, rides beside him. There are the armed seouts on fleet horses; the noisy herdsmen, urging on the flocks and droves; the women and children, a thousand souls and more; and the long train of beasts of burden, carrying the impedimenta of a great carm. Nomadic life has always its own strong the State, city and Federal offices were at 5 o'clock a salute of twenty-one guns was fired in the Capitol Square

They pass by Damascus, the superb, and leave the snowy heights of Hermon and Lebanon to their right, and the Sea of Chinereth to the left, and pause at the oak-grove of Moreh in Shechem, while hall and Gerizim look down at them. On the move through the lovely plain of Esdrolon, strewn with its roses of Sharon in patterns more beautiful than an Brussols down into the rich Jordan Valley, under the beetling crags of Gligal, up Salem's steeps on to holy Hebron and Adullam's weird cave—through the whole land, from Dan to Beersneba, they wander as fancy takes them or the necessities of their flocks and herds re-

The Sons of the Revolution held its tweifth annual meeting, followed by a banquet, at the Westmoreland Club. A number of new members were elected, and the following officers chosen:

President, W. Gordon McCabo. But the sacred character of the pilgrims quire.

But the sacred character of the pilgrims and the pilgrimage is never lost sight of. Abram is pricat as well as king of his tribe. The curavan never halts without an altar being uprecared. The idol-worshipine Camanites look on curiously as the smoke curis up before an invisible God. Abram's whole retinue understands and shares his high hope and purpose. The morning and evening sacrifice keeps them constantly in mind of it.

Abram's noble generosity has marked exemplification in his dealing with Lot. Its test and provess shine in his pursuit of the four kings and rescue of his how, his mar-minitiv in his refusal to take thread or shoe-latchet from the spoil. There are two blots on the escutcheon of his high-minded patriarchial prince—his timorous dupiletty in Egypt concerning his wife; again, his over-haste and use of human expedients to fulfil God's promise in the taking of Hagar to wife. But these are mere specks upon an effulgent disk. Abram was twenty centuries beyond his day in character and in manner of life.

God disciplined His sorvent for theso lapses—In the first instance, by a rebuke from the lips of a beathen monarch; in the second, by withholding from him for thirteen years any visible manifestations of Himself. But at length this long period of correction ended with the sudden outbursting of the giory of the shekinah upon his dreary nath.

Abram's motley clan, and the surrounding tribes as well, that this ased shelk should miraculously beget a son by his own and venerable wife, from whom in turn should spring noisy masses and tumittous nations.

The pledge of this incredible circumstance was the new name of the Deity. He was "sufficient" for this thing. "I am the Aimighty God." On that golden hook Abraham could hang his faith. And he did! He fell on his face, in that very act of adoring worship, appropriating the promise in all its fullness. In the injunctions, "Walk before Me!" and "Bo perfect!" there is rentle hint of the times when Abraham had failed to see the invisible, and had stooped to ignoble devices to ward off imaginary dangers.

This is no new covenant, but the happy assurance that Aimighty God is rising to set in motion toward their blessed consummation the contents of the covenant, the first elements of which were given at least thirty years before in Ur of the Chaldoes.

The TEACHER'S LANTERN.
What a bugaboo rerfection is to many people. Yet twenty centuries before Christ. God commanded Abraham to be carriet, God commanded Abraham to be beefect, and Jesus, with this very command apparently in mind, directs His disciples to be perfect even as their Father is perfect. Yet many seem to pride thems. Ive Ipon their imperfection, to even boast of it. He magnifies the grace of God most who lets it work to the uttermost in his heart.

El Shaddai should be the mystic talis-man, the broad phylactery bound upon our feedback. God's almightiness ought to stir our feeble faith, make us realize the romises, however exceeding great they are.

Saved from many of the Lord, conscious that His eye was on us from above. "Thou God seest me." The Lord suid. "Walk before Me." The thought of a continued purpose inheres in the Wordset thyself, be firmly purposed, thorough-ly determined to observe for the wordset thyself, be firmly purposed, thoroughset thyself, be firmly purposed, thoroughly determined to obey before Me. God and His Church need such to-day.

Frederick W. Robertson, in his charming sermon, "The Illusiveness of Life," flatly denies that God fulfilled His promise to give Canana to Abriham and his descendants. He goes further to say that He never intended to fulful it. He could only begulle a gross Israel from the fleshpots of Egypt by offering them something of the same price a land flowing with milk and honey. If He had told them that the "rost semaining for the people of God" was only inward and spiritual, and the promised land was the Jerusalem above, they would never have budged. So God offered one thing, but gave another—compensated for His failure by bestowing something greater.

Dangerous and excessive spiritualizing this. We all recognize God's educative processes with His ancient people, and their steady advance in the apprehension of spiritual truth. But we resent the idea of any double entonic we resent the idea of any double entonic were atteated by an oath and sealed with were atteated by an oath and sealed with a sign. Robertson does not prove that the covenant was not literally fulfiled. If it was not fulfiled, I would rather helieve, as many do, that God will yet make good His promise by giving reliesting to the Jowa, than to believe He never intended to give it to them. . . .

Truth is, literal and spiritual run side by side in the history of God's favored people. Abraham is literally a father of nations—Arabia. Midian, Ammon, Moab, as well as Israel. But he is also the Spiritual Father of the nations that are now being born in a day by the preaching of the Gosnel. Rings are his off-spring—David and Solomon, literally; all believers spiritually, who are made "kings unto God. His descendants are literally and phenomenally numerous, but his spiritual descendants are already numerous. spiritual descendants are already num-bered by the hundreds of millions.

What its millions of users think of it, is well expressed in these words of Mrs. Rosa Lee Cole. of Smithton, Mo., who writes: "I suffered from female troubles for 7 years. I had a pain, low down in my stomach, my feet hurt so I could not stand, and I was so weak and nervous I could hardly do anything. I was just sick all the time. At last I wrote you for advice and you recommended Wine of Cardui, which I took according to directions. I have now taken 5 bottles of Wine of Cardui and am feeling better than in the past 7 years. My feet and stomach do not hurt, my female troubles have gone, I am getting stouter and stronger, can do all my housework, work in the garden and tend to 260 little chickens."

Wine of Cardui acts directly upon the sick or disordered womanly organs or functions. It is a natural, scientific, female tonic. It contains no dangerous minerals, or other deleterious ingredients, but is purely vegetable, perfectly harmless and beneficial to young and old. Every reliable druggist sells it, in $1 bottles. THAW TO RECEIVE MEDAL FOR KILLING

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
COLUMBUS, IND., February 22.—That money is being raised by a number of traveling salesmen of Indiana to buy a medal to be presented to Harry K. Thaw, the Pittsburg millionaire, for killing Stanford White, the New York architect, is a fact that became known for the first time in this city to-day, when Frank Smith, who is employed by the Indianapolis, Columbus and Southern Traction Company, was solicited by a well-dressed young man, who told him that he was getting money for that purpose.
The stranger asked for only a penny and refused to accept larger coin. The young man, whose overcoat packet was filled with pennies, explained that he and a number of other Indianapolis traveling men had decided to solicit contributions of pennies for the purpose buying Harry K. Thaw a gold medal for killing such a man as was White.
